PREFACE

This publication presents comparable Australian production, import and export commodity statistics of manufactured goods classified in accordance with the Australian Standard Commodity Classification (ASCC). The statistics and the classification in this publication relate to the year 1979-80.

This publication is the final in this series. As an economy measure the statistics presented in this publication and in the companion publication covering goods originating in agricultural and mining industries (1312.0) will no longer be compiled and published by the ABS.

However, the ASCC will continue to be further developed and maintained. The consequent improvements in alignment between production, import and export commodity items will be reflected in future editions of the classification. This will enable users to compile their own comparable commodity statistics from published ABS or other sources.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Introduction

This publication presents comparable Australian production, import and export commodity statistics of goods originating in manufacturing industries, classified in accordance with the Australian Standard Commodity Classification (ASCC) (1207.0 and 1208.0). The statistics and the classification relate to the year 1979-80.

2. Comparable commodity statistics are used by government and private organisations for analysis e.g. of the relationships between employment, industrial structure and tariff provisions, for studies of import competition and replacement, for submissions to the Industries Assistance Commission, for the compilation of input-output tables (in situations where more specifically input-output oriented commodity statistics are not available) and for the conduct of trade and tariff negotiations e.g. within the framework of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Present status and further development of the statistics

3. This publication will be the final in this series. The statistics presented in this publication and in the companion publication covering goods originating in agricultural and mining industries (1312.0) will no longer be compiled and published by the ABS. However, the ASCC will continue to be further developed and maintained to enable users to compile their own comparable commodity statistics from published ABS or other sources.

4. For this purpose production and foreign trade commodity statistics can be obtained from the ABS publications:

Manufacturing Commodities, Principal Articles Produced, Australia (8303.0)

Overseas Trade, Australia, Part 1 — Exports and Imports (5409.0), and Imports Cleared for Home Consumption (5412.0) (available in microfiche only).

5. Anyone seeking to compile comparable production and foreign trade statistics within the framework of the ASCC would need to take into account the factors which may affect comparisons between production and foreign trade commodity statistics. These factors are outlined in paragraph 60 of the ASCC, "Part 1: Introduction, Summary Classification and Commodity Keys, 1978-79" as well as in paragraphs 35 and 36 of this publication. Users may also find reference to current treatment of confidential component production, import or export values within an ASCC standard item(s), useful in the compilation of comparable commodity statistics. Details of this treatment are outlined in paragraphs 27, 28 and 29 of this publication.

Changes in relation to the 1979-80 version of the ASCC manual

6. The ABS has not published the 1979-80 edition of the ASCC manual because the comparatively few changes to the standard commodity items for 1979-80 did not warrant the costs of publishing the manual in its entirety. Instead a key has been compiled which records the changes between the 1978-79 and 1979-80 editions of the ASCC. This key, entitled "Australian Standard Commodity Classification 1979-80 — New and Revised Standard (ASCC) Items" is available on request and can be obtained by writing to the Assistant Supervisor, Commodity Classification Services, ABS, P.O. Box 10, Belconnen, A.C.T. 2616, or by telephoning Canberra (062) 52 7144.

ASCC categories

Industry of origin categories

7. The industry of origin categories in this publication are the broadest or the most summary headings of the ASCC. They represent the industries in which the commodities, listed under them in the form of standard items, typically originate, i.e. the industries in which the commodities are mainly or typically produced. This method of ordering and presenting commodities reflects the industrial origin structure of the ASCC.

8. The industry of origin categories in the ASCC, and in this publication, are based on the industries in the 1978 edition of the Australian Standard Industrial Classification (ASIC) (1201.0).

9. It is important to note that in an industrial origin commodity classification such as the ASCC, each individual commodity item is shown only under one industry of origin heading—the industry in which the commodity typically originates.

10. In practice, of course, many commodities are produced not only by their typical industry of origin but by other industries as well. An industry of origin commodity classification should not, therefore, be confused with a cross classification of commodities by industry of production. The latter would list, under each industry, all the commodities which are actually produced in the industry, so that an individual commodity would be shown under all the industries in which it is actually produced.

11. In most cases each ASCC industry of origin category is equivalent to an industry class in the ASIC. However, in some cases, two or more ASIC classes have been combined for purposes of the ASCC to form a special combined class, i.e. a single industry of origin category. This has been necessary where many standard (ASCC) items contain commodities originating in two or more ASIC classes.

12. The industry of origin categories are identified by four-digit code numbers. Where an industry of origin category is equivalent to an industry class in the ASIC, the four-digit code number in the ASCC and this publication is that of the ASIC class. Where an industry of origin category represents a combination of ASIC classes, a four-digit code not used anywhere in the ASIC has been adopted. All instances of this kind are listed in the Appendix.

Standard items

13. Standard (ASCC) items, as contained in the ASCC manual, and according to which statistics are shown in this publication, have been formed from detailed production, import and export items and represent the most detailed common groupings of these items.

14. Thus, standard item 2341.10, 'Cotton seeds', has as its components: production item 212.16, Cotton seed; import item 222.30.00, Cotton seeds; and export item 222.30.00, Cotton seeds. However, in a large number of cases standard (ASCC) items are more broadly defined so that each one covers a number of production, import and export commodity items. For example, standard item 3169.40, 'Flexible tubing and piping, of base metal' has as its components the following items:

- Production items:

- 469.11 Flexible metal tubing (ferrous and non-ferrous), covered or lined
- 469.13 Flexible metal tubing (ferrous and non-ferrous), not covered or lined

- AICC items:

- Flexible tubing and piping, of base metal:
- 699.61.01 — Interlock type
- 699.61.03 — Square-lock type
- 699.61.05 — Corrugated (convoluted) type
- Bellows, expansion joint:
- 699.61.07 — Not exceeding 152mm internal diameter
- 699.61.11 — Other
- 699.61.19 — Other (including wholly or essentially of spirally wound wire)

- AECC item:

- 699.61.00 Flexible tubing and piping, of base metal

15. It should be noted in both examples above that the standard (ASCC) items represent the most detailed common grouping of production, import and export items, i.e. both are the most detailed items for which comparable statistics of production, imports and exports can be derived.

16. Standard items representing the most detailed common groupings of production, import and export items are identified by a six-digit code (both in the ASCC and in this publication) with the first four digits identifying the industry of origin.

17. In many instances, however, more detailed comparability between either production and import items or production and export items has been possible within a six-digit standard item. In these cases further standard items have been formed representing the more detailed categories. These standard items are identified by an eight-digit code (the first six digits of which represent the code number of the six-digit item).

Production, Import and Export Statistics and Their Valuation

18. The data for production, imports and exports shown in this publication for each standard item relate to values only. (Quantity data are not included either because quantity details are not, or sometimes cannot be, compiled for all the production, import or export items of which the standard items are composed or because different units of quantity are used or are applicable to different component items of the standard items.)

Production Statistics

19. Production statistics in this publication relate to the values of sales and or transfers out of commodities manufactured in Australia, as reported in the 1979-80 Census of Manufacturing Establishments, irrespective of whether the commodities concerned were drawn from stocks of previous years or from current production. Thus, these values are not equivalent to the value of all commodities manufactured during the year by the establishments covered in that Census, since they exclude net changes in stocks (which are not available in commodity detail) and that part of production which is utilised within the same establishment for further processing or assembly.

20. Sales of commodities by single establishment enterprises employing less than four persons are excluded from this publication since they are excluded from the commodity sales statistics compiled from the Census of Manufacturing Establishments. However, they contribute only marginally to statistical aggregates.

Basis of valuation of sales and transfers out

21. Sales relate to transactions between different enterprises (e.g. companies) and the reported sales values exclude excise and sales tax. Transfers out relate to transactions between different establishments of the same enterprise (e.g. company). Goods transferred out from one establishment to other establishments of the same enterprise are valued, for statistical purposes, at commercial selling prices. Both sales and transfers out relate only to commodities produced by the reporting establishment or to commodities produced for it on commission from materials supplied by it. Sales and transfers out of merchant goods are excluded.

Import, Imports cleared for home consumption, Duty paid and Export statistics

22. The statistics of imports presented in this publication are recorded on a general trade basis, i.e. imports comprise goods entered directly for domestic consumption together with goods imported into Customs warehouses.

23. The statistics of imports cleared for home consumption presented in this publication are recorded on a special trade basis, i.e. they comprise goods entered directly for domestic consumption together with goods cleared into the domestic market from Customs warehouses. Both sets of statistics are presented in this publication so that users may utilise whichever series meets their requirements for statistical analysis.

24. Statistics of exports are also presented in terms of a general trade basis, i.e. total exports include both Australian produce and Re-exports. Once again, to facilitate analysis, statistics of exports of Australian produce and Re-exports are provided separately.

Basis of valuation of imports and exports

25. Exports. Goods sold to overseas buyers before export are valued at the free-on-board (f.o.b.) Australian port of shipment equivalent of the actual price paid to the exporter. Where an actual price was not negotiated at the time of export (e.g. goods shipped on consignment) estimated prices are used. These estimates are based on the Australian f.o.b. port-of-shipment equivalent of the actual price expected to be obtained, taking into account:

- previous export sales to the same overseas buyer
- the quantity and quality of the goods
- any other factors likely to have a bearing on the price

The value of outside packages is included.

26. Imports. The recorded value is the value for duty (VFD) for Customs purposes. On 1 July 1976, Australia adopted the internationally recognised Brussels Definition confidential item in the prois (i.e. charges and expenses involved in delivering the goods from the place of exportation to the place of introduction in Australia, are excluded). The value for duty is based on the normal price, i.e. the price the goods would fetch at the time when duty becomes payable on a sale in the open market between a buyer and a seller independent of each other. In practice, the basis for valuation is generally taken to be the invoice price subject to certain safeguards and adjustments where necessary.

Treatment of confidential data

27. If the production, import or export component value of a standard item is confidential, the standard item has been combined, where possible, with another standard item or items. (Every effort has been made to combine standard items covering similar or related commodities. For example, standard item 2153.40, 'Unkilned rolled oats' has been combined with standard item 2153.45, 'Kilned rolled oats'.) Where, however, it was not suitable or practical to combine standard items the confidential component is shown as 'n.p.' to indicate that the data is not available for publication, e.g. standard item 2538.17, 'Wood wool'.

28. Where a significant percentage of the total value of the production, import or export component of a standard item is confidential, no value is shown in the relevant column. Instead, a footnote is inserted in the column to indicate that some commodity item(s) is/are confidential, and that the value of the non-confidential element is included in the footnote, e.g. standard item 2355.05, 'Twine, cordage, ropes and cables, plaited or not'.

29. Where, however, the confidential item in the production, import or export component of a standard item do not account for a significant percentage of the total value, the value of the non-confidential element is shown in the appropriate column and a footnote is inserted against the figure to indicate that it excludes data for the confidential item(s), e.g. standard item 2754.85, 'Basic organic chemicals, n.e.c.'.

Footnotes

30. Four common footnotes (see below) are used to identify factors which occur frequently and which could affect the statistics and their comparability. They are:

- (a) Footnote (a) is used against the production value of a six-digit standard item where the production statistic is deficient. The total production value may be deficient because in one or more of the related eight-digit standard items some production items may be confidential or statistics may not be collected for some of the commodities. For example, in standard item 3351.50, the production component of $23.7m is deficient by the value of production statistics for pre-recorded cassette tapes of radio transcriptions radio commercials, etc. relevant to standard item 3351.50.05, because statistics are not collected specifically for these commodities, and by the value of the production item of standard item 3351.50.10 because it is confidential. The nature of the deficiencies is explained in specific footnotes in the relevant eight-digit standard items. Where the deficiencies account for a significant percentage of the total production value to avoid possible confusion no figure is shown in the production column because in these situations, valid comparisons with the trade statistics would not be possible. However, for the information of the user, the value of the available and non-confidential component of the standard item is contained in the body of the footnote (e.g. standard item 2884.15.10).
- (b) Footnote (b) the complete production gap footnote. This footnote is used in the production column to indicate that production statistics are not collected specifically for any of the commodities covered by the standard item, due to gaps in the coverage of specified production items. (Partial production gap situations, i.e. where production statistics are not collected specifically for some of the commodities covered by the standard item, are covered by specific footnotes.)
- (c) Footnote (c) is used in one of the trade columns of an eight-digit standard item to indicate that data are available only at the broader six-digit item level. For example, in standard item 2345.05 where more detailed categories are provided between production and imports at the eight-digit level, the footnote (c) is shown in the export column of 2345.05.05 and 2345.05.10 to indicate that the comparable export statistics for these commodities are available at the six-digit level only.

- (d) Footnote (d)—the duplication footnote, which is shown against the description of a standard item, informs users of possible duplication in the standard item and advises them to exercise caution when comparing details of production and trade. A standard item could involve duplication in that, the parts of a commodity could be covered by its production and import statistics and the complete commodity made from the parts could also be covered by production statistics of the standard item (e.g. standard item 2343.05).

31. Apart from these common footnotes, other specific footnotes are used in this publication.

32. Not all of the various factors which could affect the content and comparability of the statistics have been footnoted, provided generally valid comparison of the data has not been jeopardised. For example, the statistics in some standard items have not been footnoted to indicate that they include data of some commodities which belong to some other standard item, i.e. the surplus footnote referred to in the ASCC manual. This was done because these surplus situations and their corresponding deficiency situations are numerous and not considered significant enough to affect valid comparisons between the data.

33. For a complete record of the various factors affecting the content and comparability of commodities as contained in the standard items, reference should be made to the ASCC manual (1208.0).

Factors which inhibit or limit the comparability of the data

34. There are various factors which could affect the comparability of commodity statistics of production, imports and exports compiled according to the ASCC. These are identified below and are intended to provide a qualitative assessment of the problems that could be encountered. The quantitative impact of some of them may only be marginal.

The factors which could affect comparability can generally be considered to fall into the following broad categories:

- Classification problems.
- Other problems.

Classification problems

35. Problems in this category arise due to the inherent differences between the production and overseas trade commodity classifications. Due to differences in the definitions of commodities in the three commodity classifications on which the ASCC is based, complete comparability between equivalent production, import and export items has not been established in a large number of instances. The partial, incomplete or very broad comparability achieved in these instances is, naturally, reflected in the statistics.

Other problems

36. This second category of problems involves issues which cannot usually be solved by improving the ASCC or its related classifications. In the main, these problems include the following:

- Valuation. One of the main problems in comparing data from the three sources is the differences between the methods of valuation, as described above, particularly in connection with transport costs, excise costs, merchants' margins, etc. For example, export values may be greater than production values because of the addition of packaging, insurance and transport costs to the point of export and because of the exporters' trade margin.
- Time of recording. Producers' sales and transfers out are recorded in businesses' accounts as occurring at the time when ownership changes. Import and export statistics relate to the time of movement of goods across the Customs frontier of the country and this does not necessarily coincide with the time at which ownership of the goods changed. Thus, sales in one year to overseas buyers may be recorded as exports in a different year. Similarly, the recording of purchases may be in one period and the corresponding imports in a different period.
- Duplication. Some standard items contain duplication in that the production and import statistics cover certain components while the production statistics could also cover the complete goods made from the components. In this type of situation care should be exercised when comparing statistics from the three series.
- Limitations in scope or coverage of statistical collections. Problems in comparison also arise due to limitations in the scope or coverage of the statistical collections which are the source of the statistics being compiled according to the ASCC. For example, in the lack of detail in the collection of data on non-merchandise trade and poor coverage of ships and aircraft stores; the exclusion from manufacturing census statistics of single establishment enterprises employing less than four persons; lack of statistics on sales of commodities produced by manufacturing establishments on commission for non-manufacturing establishments, and of production of manufactured commodities by non-manufacturing establishments. Where this occurs, production statistics (or trade statistics) could be understated.
- Differences in quality, etc. Difficulties also arise from factors such as differences in quality, material composition, substitutability of commodities, variations in the import component of goods produced in Australia or exported from Australia, etc.

INDUSTRY OF ORIGIN: CLASS 3164: METAL COATING AND FINISHING

Note: This ASIC industry of origin has been created separately with no ASCC items listed under it because:

- separate, specific, information is not available on the commodities which originate only from industry class 3164, thereby preventing the creation of meaningful and viable standard items for these commodities;
- the ASCC, at present, relates only to transportable goods, and a major proportion of the activities primary to this industry is involved in the provision of services (e.g. engraving, polishing, plating and heat treatment of metals);
- the creation of this separate industry of origin category permits the presentation of standardised commodity items for the other important metal industry classes.

(q) No production value is shown for this ASCC item because copper inserts for electric water heaters are included in ASCC item 3354.05.10, and the remaining commodities, parts for electric soil and space heating apparatus, electric hair dressing apparatus, electric smoothing irons, electro-thermic domestic appliances, n.e.s., electric immersion heaters, electric instantaneous or storage water heaters (except copper inserts for electric water heaters) and electric heating resistors (other than of carbon), are not included in specific production items.

(r) Includes value for ASCC item 3353.65.

(s) Included in ASCC item 3369.95.

Note: Footnotes (p) and (r) are not used in this table.
